Summary of Experience

Hamish is RSHP's Managing Director in France. He leads the development of the Paris office and interfaces with the project owners and project teams.

Since 2021, he has been responsible for two major life sciences research campus projects in the Paris region. Hamish previously played a key role in the development of the Bercy Charenton masterplan and participated in the Atelier International du Grand Paris, designed to examine the evolving needs of metropolitan Paris in the 21st century, through which he gained extensive urban planning experience.

He was based for a time in Lyon to supervise the construction of the new T1 terminal at Lyon-Saint Exupéry Airport, after having been responsible for the technical coordination of the project during the study phase.

From 2015 to 2019, he was project manager for the Louvre Conservation Centre in Liévin, designed to study and conserve over 250,000 works of art in exemplary conditions. Hamish led the multidisciplinary team throughout the design and construction phases, delivering a building that is considered one of the benchmarks in its sector.
