Summary of Experience

Nicholas is currently working on the extension to the British Library which will open up the building to the north east and west, providing new publicly accessible spaces, squares and routes and connecting the Library to St Pancras Station. It will also provide a new headquarters for The Alan Turing Institute, UK national Centre for data science and artificial intelligence. Nick worked on all the facades of this complex project.

He is also working on 99 Bishopsgate, a new 54 storey landmark building in the Eastern Cluster in the City of London, sensitively designed to respect protected views.

Prior to that, Nicholas worked on the concept design to planning submission for the three towers at Orchard Gate, a mixed-use project in Singapore.

Other prestigious projects which Nicholas has worked on include, South Kensington Station, The Louvre Centre for Conservation and, more recently, No.33 Park Row, a residential tower in the heart of Manhattan.
